My dear Jeffrey,

Im so sorry for a delayed response, I saw your email this morning and then got lost in my work.

The [REDACTED] has asked me to do their [REDACTED] work, over and above what I am doing, and has asked me to propose an hourly rate that I will be paid. They do not have anyone in the US that is solely responsible for this at the moment.

I met with a man at [REDACTED] - I really liked him but he says they don't exactly have a position open but wanted to meet me anyway. He was a little concerned with the international thing and how they would keep me on after the fall if I were to work with them.

I am applying to jobs posted to [REDACTED] and on [REDACTED], ones that would offer more than [REDACTED] does.

What I wanted to ask is:

1. Whether we should decrease what you give me by at least the amount of what [REDACTED] will give me for my drafting so that I am taking less from you
2. As I have 3-4 days off every alternate weekend (when I am not at [REDACTED]) could it be helpful if I go and work for, and help [REDACTED] on [REDACTED] on these days? I could also cancel the [REDACTED] if it could be helpful to you.

I love you always
