He has some traction from Google and Intel and will be meeting with Nintendo and others in Japan soon, but is still looking for his next round of investment.

Hi Jeffrey -

We have been working on our new design for the wearable and I think you will like this one - we call it the Wearality "Aviator". See the attached for some images and an overview of the business. It has the widest field of view, it is in focus everywhere, it is the lightest weight and it is foldable. When folded it is the same size as the phone and it will fit in your pocket. Works with standard 6 inch phones like the Samsung Note 4, iPhone 6+ and the Nexus 6.

We are completing the final contract with Lockheed Martin (yay - that was hard), so are ready to take this to market once we finalize the design which we expect to be soon. I appreciate your help thus far and I would be thrilled if you were interested in a further investment. I can certainly send you one of the devices (please send a shipping address), and would be happy to come visit to demo it in person.

Best regards and thanks again,

David
