Never mind, I had to put Michael in his place in front of Steve and then Steve came to my office insisting that I speak with him to clear the issue.

Thanks,

Total BS I am more than happy to respond if you like, David.

Mr. Anuj was checked in at 3:50 into room 101, then shortly after is when Michael came to the desk to ask for the Master FOM. He was making loud noise, then was asked to lower his voice. His reply then was "why is someone actually staying in these shitty rooms" then made the animal noise as he walking past these rooms. No reason why my associates or manager would lie about this incident.

Yesterday morning when Michael, Rachid and Bret confronted me in room 104. Michael actually confessed that he did do this, so why is he changing his story now?

The reason there was no complaints was because Michael and the entire F&B staff were asked to lower the noise because there were guest occupying these rooms.

Thanks,

Denise Luna

Randy, David, Howie, Michael, Denise, & Geoffrey

A. To correct your email attached (email A - from Randy, inclusive):

1. Rooms 101 and 102 where NOT occupied at the time of the incident/
2. No one made bird like noises
3. No one was singing

B. Email B (Attached): email from Chef Michael Vignola sent to Denise explaining what happened

C. Email C (attached, from Alan Hocchauser): Video review of what actually happened

1. My question since its apparent in the video that the FD agent also made the gesture - twice. I would like to see Nours email of a complaint as it seems Nour is as engaged as Michael was. Is this complaint a malicious lie? Or did someone instruct Nour to make this complaint?

2. I would like the hotel to do further investigation regarding this. I am surprised no one even bothered to review the video to see what actually happened before having a lawyer send a non-factual email.

D. Email D (attached): An email from me the next day asking if there was any complaints regarding rooms 101 & 102. Why wouldn't hotel management say something right then
