Wow, this is very exciting! Also the NYT article was fascinating (I'd be open to spending some time on these islands).

How do I learn the answer -- can I call/Skype you? (And would it be the standard "50% of what Jeffrey saved you" deal? :-)).

I was pondering what would happen when selling partnership interest: one would need to be very careful with specifying which consensus rules the implied share would follow. That is, if the coin gets forked into two, don't want the worthless fork. But there's probably a standard language about that.

I'm also attaching a paper me, Neha, and Willy are writing about privacy-preserving auditing. This is all in a closed system so auditing is about actions (system knows nothing about events), but we want to extend these techniques to audit medical studies and security vulnerability disclosure.
