I guess you were one of the altar boys that was not abused, but now feels left out.. , I agree you can always ask for more. , the usual mistake is not to make the document clear. then the principal dies, and the next person says,, Hey. but it says here that.....

I have never been going to a priest. Not my cup of tea.

Apparently sometimes it is much more fun than what I have ever expected. That I only knew that earlier in life ;)

Joke aside – I am working on a draft right now (it will take me few hours).

I appreciate your offer and I trust it would stay between us.

Somehow, it seems that I am much less stressed about that than some of my friends. Perhaps I am crazy or overtly self confident, but I think I can always ask for more any time in future, if I decide so. I have always produced a real value, and I do not want to be in a position where I do not do so. Had always problems with previous employees – ONLY when I was leaving – they would do anything to keep me, but I would get bored ;)

Also there are some other complexities and non-usual circumstances that I would like to discuss with you over the phone.

Bottom line is that right now, I am inclining toward asking for less (with more flexibility) than other way around. Although getting rich is great, I think that most likely I will not get rich from this position nor I expect this. I am rather learning and positioning myself for a next position.

When you can talk?

Thank you!

Boris
