Hi Jeffrey,

I am in the New York office working with Rich to create a list of tasks That I need to do for you.

I am at [REDACTED] the desk at east 66th street.

Calling me at this number is the best way for me to help you at this time. (or my cell [REDACTED]) all other times.

If I can get a green light to start building a OS X server at 71st that would be the first step into setting a system so I could help you in a more timely manner.

On a personal note my father is in the hospital facing possible foot amputation, and my breaking of "procedure" buying the 11" laptop, server software and the gear I used on the Island, have left me without any more personal resources to give you. Which I would gladly give if I could. I would have hoped that my job performance and character would have inspired the team to give me room to run so I could continue to identify and resolve what I believe is the underlying issue of not having the right technology platform in place. I think I am a great fit for you as a dedicated solution provider and technical coordinator for your office worldwide. But to do this I need company resources which would be about $10,000 to spend to get the 71st job done, and I need reimbursement of my personal investment in this company of $3,000. Just so I can get things done, make things happen. If this sounds reasonable to you please green Light it asap.

Jeffrey just give me a chance to do this for you in the fastest most cost effective possible and I will always do that for you. Otherwise my blind dedication to this job was misplaced and my approach is so off the mark that maybe I need to consider resigning my position.

Thats not what I want in anyway, but the current system is not working and only you have power to fix it.

Regardless of what you decide to do I want you to know that i found you incredibly inspiring to work with.
