Ok great, thank you so much!

How is Paris?

Sneaky,

Just spoke to a few colleagues who is also pushing for a salary increase. They said the final adjustments to salary and title changes will be made by the end of the next week. So if I don't do it now then it won't happen... I am already pushing for title change but I don't know how diplomatically and correctly approach the salary thing. I can't just say: "

Hi guys, I know I got a funding of 100k for a year and getting paid less than a half of it?"

Also couldn't get hold of [REDACTED] (who deals with this stuff) and he is leaving tonight to meet [REDACTED] in Davos for the WEF... so I don't think I will have the chance to talk...

Would you be able to ask [REDACTED] If they can rise my salary to 50-54k? The reason is because I think he doesn't know half of the story and comparing my salary as equal or below to ppl who works in external relations / event team. But I am [REDACTED] and do research and writing so in comparison to other [REDACTED] who was also recently hired, I get paid the peanuts (while there is no struggle with my funding). The salary for other program assistants is 50-55 k per year.

Does it makes sense to you?
