Subject: Question from the Daily Mail RE Jeffrey Epstein

Hello,

My name is Daniel Bates and I cover New York for the Daily Mail.

We are following up something in relation to your client, Jeffrey Epstein, and I wanted to ask you some questions ahead of the piece going in the paper.

Both relate to a British man called Peter Mandelson.

We have been told that in March 2009 Mr Epstein was contacted by Mr Mandelson who asked him to speak to Jamie Dimon, the chief executive of JP Morgan, with a view to setting up discussions between the two men of important financial matters.

Is that correct? And is that a correct summary of the conversation?

Secondly, did Mr Epstein contact Mr Dimon on behalf of Mr Mandelson? What was the nature of the conversation between the two men?

We understand that at the time this took place Mr Epstein was on day release following his conviction. I just want to double check with you that is factually correct as well.

Please let me know as soon as you can - an article is due to go in the paper tomorrow.

Thanks

Daniel
