JE,

More medical but this time my brother, the physicist.

In 1992, my brother Philip, had surgery for prostate cancer (with yours truly sitting with hi in the hospital for a week!) It was successful qt the time. Since then he's had other treatments. Now, he writes that his PSA is rising (despite surgery, radiation, extra drugs) and he is reaching out for advice. He is 74, the same age as our father when he died of prosate cancer.

He writes:

Subject: Update on my health

...On my front, my PSA keeps going up after surgery, radiation, hormones and two extra drugs. My urologist wants me to see an oncologist, but the one who treated me for the leukemia is on extended sick leave.

If you still has relationship with the people doing prostate cancer research, I would like to get some advice. I have attached a summary of my cancer history. ...

Perhaps you know something about prostate cancer or and/have access to the right people. If so, please advise.

Also, do you know Mike Milken. Ten years ago, I met him at my TED dinner in February 2001. Months later, on a hot Sunday afternoon in August, he called me out of the blue at Eastover Farm, and said he remembered my mentioning that my older brother Philip, a NASA physicist, had prostate cancer. He talked to me for over an hour, and suggested Philip go to see top specialist, a Dr. Patrick Walsh in Baltimore, which he could help facilitate. It was an act of kindness that quite amazing to me. However, my brother's brilliance as a physicist comes with the expense of all kinds of phobias, one of which is a fear of travel. He would not budge from Raleigh-Durham, where he now lives. And that was the end of the discussion.

I'm no longer in touch with Mike Milken. If you know him and can give me a reliable email and/or mail address, I can contact him.

Thanks in advance.

Best regards,

JB
