

From: Eva Dubin <[REDACTED]>

To: Jeffrey <jeevacation@gmail.com>

Subject: FW: WSJ Coverage

Date: Wed, 14 Dec 2011 16:08:11 +0000

Importance: Normal

From: [REDACTED]

To: [REDACTED]; [REDACTED]; [REDACTED]

CC: [REDACTED]

Subject: WSJ Coverage

Date: Wed, 14 Dec 2011 16:04:57 +0000

Good Morning,

Please find below great coverage by the Wall Street Journal from the event on Monday night. Getty Images posted their photos here as well. Please let me know if you have any questions.

Thank you,
Christie

Friends Toast a Center

<http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052970203430404577096800341159424.html>

On the top floor of the Mandarin Oriental Hotel Monday evening, the six-month-old Dubin Breast Center of the Tisch Cancer Institute held its inaugural benefit, with champagne toasts and violin performances. The comprehensive medical facility, at the Mount Sinai Medical Center, focuses on breast health and cancer treatment.

[CANCER]

Getty Images

Above, Tracy Pollan with Kenneth Davis, Eva Dubin and Michael J. Fox at the Dubin inaugural benefit.

"I never had a bar mitzvah," said Eva Dubin, the physician, philanthropist and former "Miss Sweden" who founded the Dubin Center. "So all of my friends are coming out now."

Among those friends were hedge funder Paul Tudor Jones II, music industry bigwig Tommy Mottola, the actor Michael J. Fox, and, of course, Ms. Dubin's husband, Glenn Dubin, the philanthropist and founder of Highbridge Capital Management LLC. The crowd of more than 450 helped raise more than $1 million for the center, which has treated over 9,000 patients so far.

[CANCER]

Getty Images

Thalia Mottola.

Ms. Dubin said she was inspired to create the 15,000-square-foot facility, which she conceived of eight years ago, because she felt she was in a unique position as a doctor, donor and breast-cancer survivor. "I love being able to help women, and I'm planning to stay involved as long as I'm here," she said.

Over a dinner of roasted chicken, Mr. Jones's daughter, Caroline, 21 years old, performed original songs, followed by a duet with the English contemporary violinist-slash-model Charlie Siem. The two stole the show with a solid cover of Bryan Adams's "Heaven."

"[Mr. Siem] is the hottest young violinist in the world," said Mr. Mottola, after the performance.

Ms. Dubin and Mr. Siem, 25, are family friends, the violinist said. "The contemporary violin industry is definitely on the up," he added.

"Really," he assured, while shaking hands with Ms. Dubin. "Violin is just waiting to be discovered by the masses."