can you give me a breakdown of your scores? I am confident you will do better next time. I wish you had not followed the advice of your friends, and instead had listened to mine. The lsat are not an intelligence test, and you took it in a language that was not your own.. it takes six months to a year for an english speaker to learn the techniques, you only had 4 months. if you will take it in june, you should start studying again today. I will be all the help I can i cant understand why so bad, i have been preparing for the test for 4 months, so much efforts, time and money invested in it - and still no good result

I am not stupid, i had excellent marks at high school, was among the best in Algebra always!! always did well at university..but the LSAT makes me feel that I am a dumb kid, so crazy i will be taking it again in june or october i think if i ll have enough motivation to prepare for it while in australia..

thank you jeffrey for all your encouragements and help.. you are great and you know it
