Two further things;

1) In my humble opinion you would do so much better buying a plot of land and then creating your own "Xanadu". It would be so much cheaper than paying a large premium to someone else for their version, which would never be quite right. You have the team (Linda Pinto etc) who are very familiar with Morocco and I would be there to help.

Within 2 years you would have created something far more imposing, stylish and elegant than those other offerings like "Dar Olaf" which has all the charisma of a Four Seasons resort.

The only one which would be near impossible to recreate would be Bin Ennakhil.

2) There is a young German entrepreneur, called Lars Windhorst, who would like to meet you at your convenience. He has a colourful background and has been bankrupted twice but is on the accent again. I like him and I think you would too. Incidentally, Lars recently met with Les Wexner, at Les's request to discuss Lars's recent acquisition of the lingerie company La Perla. Let me know if you would be agreeable to this and I will be happy to introduce you.
