Im not sure how or if to respond, when your account was overdraft by 2 dollars i assumed it was an error.

So it is June and it seems there has been no progress with regards to my birthday gift of finding a [REDACTED]. At this point I have no money and unfortunately I don't have enough [REDACTED] to be able to move forward on my own. I am confused because on one hand you spend thousands sending me to [REDACTED] and on the other I have to eat junk food and dye my hair dark because I can't afford otherwise. When my account was overdraft by $2, your reaction and lack of concern was astounding. While I appreciate the [REDACTED] the stress of everything else is overwhelming at the moment and I need to know what to expect and not be left in the same position as I was with regards to my visa. Should I simply assume not to rely on you?

I know you were convinced that being your submissive traveling companion was the pinnacle of my personal and professional life, but my aspirations are a bit higher. I never understood why you preferred to squash girls' ambitions instead of trying to support and encourage growth beyond that of a masseuse, assistant or a housekeeper. I traveled with you since 18 - my whole adult life! You have influenced me more than anyone, including my parents. So whether or not I do well, and whether you like it or not, you will have played a huge role in it. It makes little sense for you to get pleasure from proving your point rather than taking pride in my success. We both know it would take little effort for you to have a long-term positive impact on my life. You have the means and the power to actually be helpful, no good reason not to, and yet this is the situation you think I deserve to be in after all we've been through. You make no secret that you helped GM, [REDACTED] even the brother you hate, get established in their professional lives and you always claimed our relationship was in many ways more substantial, so I'm perplexed by your current attitude.

You claimed there was no feasible solution to my visa, you periodically send me [REDACTED] and question my [REDACTED] when I suggested a [REDACTED] you dismissed it with one word and no further comments, when I started a business and tried to discuss it you showed no interest, even last week you told me not to aspire too high, and the only topic you intently discuss with me is sex. Although that is my favorite pastime, I am capable of other things too. While I think we can agree you are not an authority on relationships or emotional matters, there is no doubt your business and 'persuasion' skills are unmatched. So why do you have so little guidance for me when it comes to my success?
