Sorry for the delay, it's good to be busy but prioritizing can be challenging. I'll do billing next week, we went through the 20 hours for this month and then some.

I did follow up with Elina like JEE asked, but it had nothing to do with the PB computer update. She was having problems Skyping with the boss from her flat here... she stopped responding without a real resolution, so I'll ping her again to see if she still needs help.

Did the 2 AT&T iPhones that were still at the house get returned? I forgot to look when I was last there.

Summary

■ like to order 6 Network Backup Drives, and 5 Shipping boxes. The Network drives would come to NY and ship out with the new computers. A box would be shipped to the locations where the old computers are (explanation below).

6 of WD 8TB My Cloud Network Backup Drives @ $319.99 each

5 of OWC Shipping Safe Box For Apple 2013 and later 27" iMac Models @ $70 ea.

Explanation

A. Network Backup Drives.

At 71st we have a Time Capsule that the laptop and iMac backup to (it's almost full), but we have NO backups of any of the other machines. If we did, we could have avoided the whole Palm Beach iMac disaster by shipping up a small backup drive instead of a full iMac.

This iMac Pro upgrade is a rare opportunity to easily deploy these across the other houses. I can set them up here, configure the new machines to look for them then the house managers just need to plug them into their main network switch with the cables we send with them. Everything happens automatically, nothing to configure or screw up. When the next massive upgrade comes, these drives can be sent to me instead of the full computers.

B. Shipping Boxes.

When I thought through the math of it, my original suggestion has the iMac Pro shipping boxes each taking 4 trips back and forth, and I worry that's asking too much of them, that they get dinged up too much on trips 1, 2 and 3 and don't provide adequate protection when we send the iMac Pros out to their final homes.

These boxes can be shipped directly to each location by OWC, for the house managers to pack up the old computers. The boxes are designed specifically for the machines they're packing, so there's no risk of damage from improper packing. They can either be loaded onto the plane or shipped to us. We'll only use the iMac Pro boxes for 2 trips — from apple to NY, & from NY to their final destinations.

$70 each (free shipping to most locations) is a bargain compared to the hassle of damage claims, and [REDACTED] spend half of that shipping the empty iMac Pro boxes to the houses anyway.

Question: Where are these going? [REDACTED] assuming:

1 for 71st, 6th floor

1 for Palm Beach

1 for Zorro

1 for Paris

1 for LSJ

Where's #6 go?
