Hi Jeffrey

In which time zone are you? I am back in Paris, would be cool to talk to you. Lost money paid for the degree in Sydney, since i did only one semester but it was a big Australian experience + I might be able to transfer subjects back to Sorbonne.

will be so happy to see you sometimes and to learn from you more just like in August 2011, but maybe more intellectually since the sexual knowledge pushed me to do not a right thing as you saw it yourself...I was too influenced by the power of sex I learnt ahah and need of money for school at the moment I am trying to understand currency markets and exchange because I need to figure out if I have to leave all money I have on my aussie account or transfer everything to a French one. In AUS I gain 6 % interests keeping money in bank + aussie dollar grows while in France it is 2%. But transferring money from AUS to France will cost a lot of money too, if I do it each time i need cash in Paris.

May I have your professional advice ? It is not millions we are talking about but it is still necessary to understand the system in order not to loose

miss your smile, this funny grin
