I have a third guy I just thought of. His name is sam krugman. He has been a project manager for me since 1998. He oversaw the construction of yhg and every personal residential construction project I have ever had. Married. Has worked in the vi and in the bahamas. Might love the idea of a gig like this. He still works for me but is under-utilized and might welcome an opportunity like this. He has had myriad opptys to take advantage over the years but simply does not have the constitution. I like him and trust him; he can manage the island but can also (and simultaneously) handle any other renovation and/or repair requirements you may have on 71st, at the ranch, in paris, etc simultaneously. A bit of a hippy looking dude, but utterly reliable.

There is a guy named Steve Gamble. Married, two kids, but they go to school in New Zealand I think. His wife's name is Diann. He was captain of my boat (Kaori) for quite some time. We parted on very good terms (it was time for him to go tend to some family business). Responsible, smart, trustworthy. Not a "drinker" etc etc. I recommend him highly. Not sure if he would come w/ or w/o wife, but he was married with a young kid when he worked for me and was apart from them for months at a time. It's the nature of the life.

A second recommendation is another guy who also worked for me for many years. His name is Martin Lucas. He was captain of my first boat and the second for a time. He then worked for igy for a while. He is southern baptist. Never had a drink in his life. Honest as the day is long. Single, never married. Probably around sixty-ish by now. Knows his way around the virgin islands socially etc very well. Trust him completely too.

I would suggest meeting with each of them.
