Though I am helping to prepare a graduate level hacking class, which is probably more difficult than it should be. But you knew that would happen :)

I agree with you to an extent about walking, but as someone who is truly afraid to lose it (50% stop walking between 18-25, another 50% 25.50, and another 50% after 50), I'm not quite ready to give up on it, just ready to stop walking from class to class and not get accommodated. That's what Skype and YouTube are for. Plenty of PhDs happy to help me.

Agreed, but if it's Advanced Placement, I have an exam to prepare them for. If it's intro, then I can have fun with them bad . it should be tough otherwise a waste. teaching something too easy is silly, you need to put your own spin on it. . programing by listening. is music a program for the brain. . think about the similarity between readign and composing music. baa -ba ba - baaa ba - ba ...?

Well said. Just got offered a teaching job for the Fall. Intro or Advanced Placement Computer Science for a rural high school with 0 computer science support. Could be an interesting way to give back. Thoughts?
