Though I am helping to prepare a graduate level hacking class, which is probably more difficult than it should be. But you knew that would happen :)

I agree with you to an extent about walking, but as someone who is truly afraid to lose it (50% stop walking between 18-25, another 50% 25.50, and another 50% after 50), I'm not quite ready to give up on it, just ready to stop walking from class to class and not get accommodated. That's what Skype and YouTube are for. Plenty of PhDs happy to help me.

Well said. Just got offered a teaching job for the Fall. Intro or Advanced Placement Computer Science for a rural high school with 0 computer science support. Could be an interesting way to give back. Thoughts?
