I think Rachel(the first article author) is the best for that. within the few months it was a few people tried to make her remove that article and threatening her and her family by messages every day. bothering every of her family member and even her mother co-workers to make her remove that article. long story I can tell you sometime

It took some persuasion to make her keep it and she ended up keeping. it was brave of her. but now she is super loyal and I can trust her some more things are on the way. the circle is longer than I wanted - a reporter submit article, editor doesn't approve etc. was like that with Forbes, Wired, Entrepreneur.

I don't like to bother about the process, just keep pushing towards results. it takes some time and patience anyways it all makes me want to fix it and have beautiful search under your name in Google even more

Another great option Clay Dillow <http://fortune.com/author/clay-dillow/>

Alyssa Oursler <http://www.teainacoffeeshop.com/portfolio/>

The both are good, organized and smart yes, I have couple other candidates. asked about their availability, will get back to you

I'd think if you can video film them too. it'll be useful content do you have a writer that " you can hire " to interview say 15 scientists to document their relationship with me. it should be someone who writes really well. dylan is good, and useful but prose is not his thing
