Aaron's has been questioning whether to remain in the sport at all, so that's why they haven't committed to a sponsorship yet. They want to spend more time with Brian and get to know him as well. (I saw an email from 2 days ago from one of the head people at Aarons wanting to spend time with BV and myself at the Sonoma race this month) Aarons does not know of the blogs or articles about me. MWR only found out about them on Thursday and feels like they need to inform Aarons of them since they are contemplating sponsoring BV. There is a chance they may not want to sponsor a car at all regardless, but this certainly will not help the cause to persuade them to come on board. He is not trying to blame me for the difficulty in finding a sponsor or for the fact Aarons hasn't committed yet. But we have to be realistic in that once they find out about the media, it may deter them away from Brian.

I can forward brians pwerpoint to [REDACTED] has not committed to sponsoring him, for the past three months, if they already knew of your blogs they would have mentioned, it. Looking for reasons why he is having a difficult time, cannot be put onto your shoulders.
