Mort,

I am happy to come by today for the coffee that you suggested we have. As I stated yesterday, I have given Chris the first set of bad numbers bad numbers contained in the performance report, most troubling is the crut amount, listed as an investment asset. Chris said it was a " legacy " number. As I mentioned I believe there is a way for my fees to be deductible. reducing the true out of pocket to an amount that does not require pepto bismol for you to swallow.

I am seeing Joel Klein tomorrow, and with you consent would like to raise some of these issues. I think that your friends at Goldman can play a role, but only a limited one. they should guide you on the investments (with very strict oversight). the investments are a small portion of the mess. reporting is an even smaller one

I have included a contract that has two payments the first of 22 million and the second of 8. I am happy to explain any details, you can take some comfort that this agreement is the same approved by paul weiss and alan halperin for another client, but i added a provision that returns your fee if i die, as this is really personal to me and you.

I am leaving tomorrow and have to decide on taking on either you or another difficult situation. but, I can't do both. so if you want to move forward you will have to make a decision today, if not I will return all redacted documents to you asap, as you already know I only wish you well.
