..i got the picture with the door you sent me.

i was thinking at the sundial and sun we want to paint. the platform of the sundial is perfect circle and would look beter i think with the sun in the center. i know it looks a little funny with the black beam starting from nose, but it might look funny even the beam would start in the between eyes like in the image with the sun you sent me at the begining because our beam is too thick. beside the sun would not be centered..

i played a little in computer., i was thinking if we dont draw the nose..,but still looks funny. or if we dont draw the entire face..but doesnt look that good.

then i rotate the sun with the face a few degree, i put the black beam on top starting from the center, then if we paint the continuing of the beam on the floor in opposite direction(last picture attached)..it seems it looks good. the continuing line of the beam on the floor could be gray somehow like the shadow of the beam on the floor.. so when you look from top you see that dark line in the middle beside we will have the shadow of the beam on the floor..

what do you think about last picture attached? the white circle around the sun is the place where we have the rocks on the floor and where we can write the hours..
