Good day boss,

No sir. When I tested it, the receiver turned itself off twice and removed itself from Airplay device list on the mac. I believe either the mac is sending bad packets, which is causing the receiver shut down or volume output 'protocols' is too high or set incorrectly on the mac and the receiver automatically shuts down as a safe guard (which is odd. The specs of the receiver states that it is more than adequate for the mac). I should have an answer by Monday. I have a friend that has a lower model receiver, but it has the airplay feature. I will be able to take a look at it on Sunday afternoon. I believe I can find a solution by cross referencing his setup with yours or at least be put on the right path.

I placed the ipad you asked to be reset on kitchen table next to your macbook.
