Hi [REDACTED].

Thanks for forwarding this information. I can confirm that both of these ESL courses are indeed 0 credits so they will not help you with regard to making progress toward your degree. The course I mentioned in my previous message today is a 3-credit option.

Given that you tested into ESL 6 which is the highest level of ESL, my feeling is that you could probably handle the 3 credit option I recommended. However, I certainly understand if you would prefer to try the ESL courses instead.

In terms of cost, the 3 credit course I referenced would be approximately $4185. The ESL courses are less expensive ($1190 each) since you would not be earning credits. Those two courses combined would be approximately $2380.

Best,
Dechen

Hi [REDACTED].

I do not show you as registered for any summer courses at present so I presume you resolved these issues.
For your reference, the Academic Writing course which I recommended you take this summer is -

Academic Writing - 1227 - NWRW 1104 - A

Associated Term: Summer 2014
Registration Dates: Apr 07, 2014 to Aug 22, 2014
Levels: Non Credit, Non-degree, Undergraduate Attributes: Liberal Arts, Open to Non Majors, Writing Rubric

New York City Campus
Seminar Schedule Type
0.000 OR 3.000 Credits
View Catalog Entry

Scheduled Meeting Times

Type	Time	Days	Where	Date Range	Schedule Type	Instructors
Class	6:00 pm - 7:50 pm	TR	Eugene Lang 65 W11th 259	Jun 03, 2014 - Jul 22, 2014	Seminar	Margaret Stanek Fiore (P)

If you are interested in taking a Global Studies course this summer, I would recommend you consult the listings at <http://nsglobal.info/summer-2014-courses>

It would be wise to avoid 5000 level courses at this time however there are some good 3000 level courses that might be of interest to you (Women and the Law, International Policy in the Modern Age, etc.).

I will enter your transcript this week. It looks like we will be able to award you 35 credits for your coursework completed in Russia.

Best,
Dechen
