From: Tyler Shears <█████████████████>
    To: Christina Galbraith <galbraith_christina@yahoo.com>
    Cc: jeffrey epstein <jeevacation@gmail.com>
Subject: Re: NET Site update
    Date: Mon, 28 Jul 2014 18:25:18 +0000

Yes the login is as follows

████████████████████████████████
████████████████████████████████
████████████████████████████████

The updates word changes and paragraph addition are completed.

Analytics access and webmaster tools access can be found through the following GMAIL login (please provide this to Darren)

██████████████████████
██████████████████████

The site map is here and also listed with Google Webmaster Tools - The site map should auto-generate when new content is submitted to the site.

On Sun, Jul 27, 2014 at 2:33 PM, Christina Galbraith <█████████████████████> wrote:

> Hi Tyler,
>
> Could I have access to the NET site, so I can update it with content when needed? That will make it much easier. Also, thanks for updating me on the following:
>
> - sitemap and google analytics.
> - could you change the word, Addis Ababa Labs for iCog Labs thruout the front page article.
> - could you add the text below to the end of that same article?
>
> Additional partners of iCog Labs are Humanity+, a media group dedicated to responsible technology, and Novamente LLC. "We are dedicated to a grand vision," iCog Labs asserts. "We dream of making a breakthrough in the capability of AI systems to think, learn and create, and using this breakthrough AI to improve the lives of people in Africa and around the world." Visit iCog Labs at: http://www.i-coglabs.com/
>
> I've been linking the NET site to various blogs and will link it to the AI teams Jeffrey backs: (MIT, OpenCog, J. Bach).

thanks for the update,
Christina

Christina Galbraith
cell ███████████████
ema ███████████████