I never understood why we cannot communicate like normal people do and why I cannot talk to you on the phone. I would have really appreciated to send you my list expenses if in return I had feedbacks of you and we could discuss on a regular basis (not only about my statement and money) but about other things in life so that I could learn and grow as a person. Unfortunately this was not the case since there was zero communication from your side (even when I was sending you my statement) I had no idea if what I was doing was right or wrong. I tried to be careful. The fact of not hearing from you and having to send you just my statement would make me really upset because as I told you yesterday I felt it was the only tie that was left between us since you new nothing about me and again my emotions took control over everything else.
