

From: "jeffrey E." <jeevacation@gmail.com>

To: [REDACTED]

Subject: Re: Report issued 3AM this morning before we left Hospita

Date: Sun, 21 Dec 2014 14:44:54 +0000

thanks for the thorough report. unlikely to know full results normally for 6-8 weeks. things will come and go. not fun, but he is lucky to have you at his side

On Sun, Dec 21, 2014 at 10:35 AM, [REDACTED] > wrote:

At least we are working with some data finally. On arrival from the medevac the doctors here were waiting and he received a full battery of MRI's, CT scans and the Neurologist did a comprehensive assessment immediately. Except for the grim news about the location of the fractures things were looking up: his tactile response was good mentally he had situational awareness.

The "respiratory arrest" occurred when they were setting up the Halo Fixator and I believe he just had his airway blocked with a build up of mucus - which has been a minor situation all along due to a slight sinus drip and being flat on his back for 2 days. I am just speculating but the doctor echoed this idea.

When it occurred around around 2:30AM this morning it was unexpected and they intubated him immediately and put him under general anesthetic. He was not breathing for around 30 seconds maximum due to the quick response.

The [REDACTED] here seems knowledgeable and competent and their management skills so far seem outstanding.

The plan is to keep him under anesthesia until tomorrow morning at which time the best course of action will be reviewed based on his condition.

One bit of good news was that they were able to align the [REDACTED] last night. I saw the [REDACTED] and it was a dramatic improvement compared to his arrival and I was told it indicates that the [REDACTED] may not be necessary provided [REDACTED] can be successfully accomplished.

A minor loss of sensitivity in the right foot and hand seems to be from [REDACTED] there is cautious optimism from the team that this will dissipate with a little time. Or not.

The [REDACTED] was a surprise and certainly would have added to his discomfort on the [REDACTED]

We're it not for the "respiratory arrest" episode he would have been on the phone with you today - groggy but coherent. Even with the various meds he maintained a sharp ability to focus on the details at hand last night.

Headed over to [REDACTED] now but I don't expect any update to the program until tomorrow morning here.

Jim

On Dec 21, 2014, at 2:42 PM, jeffrey E. <jeevacation@gmail.com> wrote:

not so good

On Sun, Dec 21, 2014 at 8:03 AM, [REDACTED] wrote:

--

please note

The information contained in this communication is confidential, may be attorney-client privileged, may constitute inside information, and is intended only for the use of the addressee. It is the property of JEE

Unauthorized use, disclosure or copying of this communication or any part thereof is strictly prohibited and may be unlawful. If you have received this communication in error, please notify us immediately by return e-mail or by e-mail to jeevacation@gmail.com, and destroy this communication and all copies thereof, including all attachments. copyright -all rights reserved

--

please note

The information contained in this communication is confidential, may be attorney-client privileged, may constitute inside information, and is intended only for the use of the addressee. It is the property of JEE

Unauthorized use, disclosure or copying of this communication or any part thereof is strictly prohibited and may be unlawful. If you have received this communication in error, please notify us immediately by return e-mail or by e-mail to jeevacation@gmail.com, and destroy this communication and all copies thereof, including all attachments. copyright -all rights reserved