

From: "Masha Drokova" <[REDACTED]>

To: "jeffrey epstein" <jeevacation@gmail.com>

Subject:

Date: Fri, 03 Aug 2018 04:07:56 +0000

Your analogy about politics (that the one who is more popular wins an election) made me think that it's exactly what people do with investing, at least in tech.

The more buzz in Twitter and press a startup has the more money it'll raise. It actually doesn't matter if it's negative or positive buzz. I don't think our mind can differentiate if something is negative or positive. It seems like it counts only number of mentions.

I've looked at all companies who raised largest amounts of money. It's exactly how it works - more buzz, more money raised, the higher valuation on IPO/[REDACTED]

Sent via Superhuman iOS