Do you think I should participate in the mediation, as the mediator requested?

If the two daughters, who are beneficiaries of the trust, requested legal representation to be paid from the trust, if they were to participate, why should I?

My position is that I should not participate since this is a father and children situation, I am not being legally represented and therefore I should not say anything. I can listen to the discussion and reserve myself the right to be silent. Do you think this is the right thing to do?
