Heading into year end, banks have no interest in accumulating fixed income inventory as they risk GSIB charges. As a result we have seen some decent moves even for very short dated bonds. This typically reverses post Dec 31st. For example we own $2MM of the Frontier 7.125% 03/2019. They have traded down from $100.25 to $98. JPM feels there is no way they don't pay these bonds come March given how much they have available on their revolvers.

Let me know if you are interested in this name or any others that have been hit with year-end liquidity issues.

Paul
