I agree with you, but Why do you think it should be asap?

Ok. The attorneys had a call yesterday to work out the logistics of the mediation process. I'll get back to you when we reach agreement.

OK. Let me know when/if there's something more for me to do

No. Sit tight for now. It looks like we have a fair summary of the approximate distributions to date, at least for purposes of using the information at the mediation.

I understand, generally. But it's still not completely clear to me what I should do.

Should I take the real books on Anthony's spreadsheet (some are just small monographs and pamphlets), write to the publishers, and ask for an exact accounting of sales?

Noam

The task here is not to "prove up" the amounts of money given and received. Rather, it is to put before the mediator a set of facts which show that plenty of money has been given to the children and grandchildren and the money remaining in the trust is intended to be, and is, yours. On that basis I do not think it is necessary to follow up with publishers at this time. If you think that Anthony's spreadsheet is substantially incorrect, then we should have a discussion with Anthony. I will follow up with him on the separate issue of continuing royalties on the works listed on his spreadsheet.

I have no way of knowing whether Anthony's spreadsheet is accurate. He said that it is a "conservative" estimate. I take that to mean that it may be underestimated. I have no independent evidence right now, but could write to the publishers -- those that still exist; some do not -- to ask them to provide me with explicit data. Would you like me to do that? Anything else?

Noam

Maybe I misunderstand your email. Are you saying that you received the royalties and the children and grandchildren got none other than as we discussed this afternoon? Am I to understand that Anthony's spreadsheet is substantially accurate?
