Jeffrey,

B727 disposal

Option 1

Gary Anzalone is expecting an Offer for the 727 parts this week, from a company that would part it out, I'll advise if received.,

Option 2

I'm also in communication with James Moon a Non- Profit organization called "Sight 2 Save"

I offered him the fuselage at $200k

They want to convert the 727 into a flying Eye hospital for South Africa it sounds, here is his web link:

www.sight2save.org

First he said he would be happy to pay $200k of course he would rather you donate the plane.

If there is a tax advantage for you, would this be a possible avenue?

Or maybe we could get $50 or $75k out of him?

See his email below,

Thx

Larry

Hi Larry,

Thanks for email and for getting back to me.

Ok thank you for this information, much appreciated and from our side it would be good to progress discussions for your airframe.

We have been looking for an airframe for the past 2/3 years for our international aviation non-profit, an airframe that we can acquire and convert into the world's first flying eye opticians - so a great use for the aircraft saving sight worldwide.

We have everything in place, except a suitable airframe that we can convert.

From our side a B727 works very well and would create a good space for our onboard opticians.

I would be happy to do $200K, but would need to be a lease purchase as we cannot do $200K cash upfront and then the cost of returning to airworthiness and converting into a flying eye opticians. Just to throw it out there, would the aircraft owner not just wash his hands of this airframe and lets us have it? we can then begin paying for parking etc. and we can provide images of the aircraft saving sight worldwide, so he knows the aircraft was put to the proper use of saving sight.

Let me know thoughts and happy to answer any questions.

Looking forward to working with you and thanks for helping me with this.

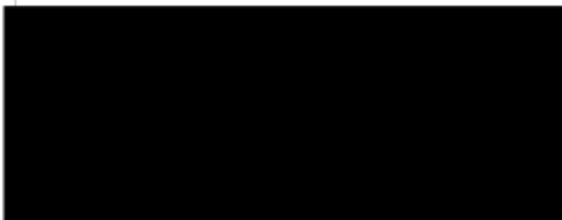

The gift of sight worldwide...

Best regards

James Moon
