read their statements to the press..in their letter to me and in the press they dispute every statement I made,in my retirement letter as well.., and in particular the statement that in order to be able to cross examine I would have to first be dismissed. State Press is the only paper to point out that in fact in order to go to that stage the President must first issue and order of dismissal, which I can then appeal. IT is interesting that that is the only one they tried to defend in detail.. because they know they can't sleaze through on the others.

anyway.. this is fun. Because they basically said.. we are mad and we wont do anything about it this time..

The retirement letter your client submitted yesterday (copy attached) did not simply announce his retirement, but instead made several disparaging statements about the University and the investigation process. He then released a statement on Twitter with additional commentary (see below) and contacted the State Pre

Read it . !! Your interpretation is wrong

Should I have Justin correct it, or just let it lie. As you may have seen, they are claiming I sent my retirement letter to the press.. I did not. I suppose there is some advantage with them threatening me with false claims. That is disparagement isn't it? :)
