Dear Jeffrey you change so many peoples lives, and on every single day of their lives, in such a profound way, it is truly unbelievable!!

Dear Jeffrey,

I am not sure which would be the best route to take and I just want to see what is best for you so that I can make my search more specific.

(Oh before I forget Saries ex George's family have opened a beautiful food store, restaurant, and wellness center just down the street where I have been staying. I think its him -Bamford)

Back to apartments. I dont know whether to look at long term vs short term. Short term literally add what seems like 40% on to the price for the exact same apartment you could get long term.

However the difficulty with long term is due to the fact that I do not have work proving that I earn four times the amount of the rent, and no UK benefactor (the person has to own property in the UK) I would have to pay 6 months up front. What I would do with long term is only take it with a 6 month break clause, so that you can leave after 6 months. There is also a deposit with long term which I think you get back at the end if you haven't caused damage.

Then there is also the question of must I look for a space where [REDACTED] could visit because it makes it a slightly different deal. But even if its one bedroom, I could give her my bed.

And then as always I know this is not your responsibility and you have given me the world already and I would understand if I had to sort it myself from a financial stand point.

Love and miss you
