I have some bad news. I have been told by the powers-to-be that I must cancel your seminar. The reason is that in a recent graduate student survey about title IX issues some students reported that you made comments that made some of them uncomfortable and I was called out for not responding to those comments. Specifically, there was reference to when in my class you said something to the effect that my recovery was probably aided by being surrounded by beautiful women, and I said nothing.
