I don't know whether you also acquired the Greater St. James island last year, as was suggested in at least one news report yesterday. I saw some of the coverage of the damage to USVI and other Caribbean islands today on the Rachel Maddow show, and on that heard an interview with the governor of the VI. Seeing all that severe destruction of even hefty structures, and things like air traffic control towers, made me feel badly about the sort of damage suffered by all the buildings and facilities (and boats?) that you put your care, attention and resources towards.

Other than concern about anyone you know or employ being hurt in the storm, I suppose my key short-term concern is about the integrity and use of the utility pipe from Little St. James to St. Thomas and about water and power on the Greater island, if applicable. Plus, I suppose, security.

I can only imagine how disappointed and upsetting this monster storm has been for you. Sorry. I'm pretty reachable on the phone during Pacific time daytime after 10am PDT.
