The memorable one-liners, the witty turns of phrase, the perfect sentences – everything can seem so effortless when a brilliant speaker is addressing an audience at an Intelligence Squared event, a business conference or even in Parliament. Naturally talented as many of these speakers are, they all prepare – and many of them have sought advice on how to write and deliver those perfect sentences.

Philip Collins, one of the world's leading authorities on, and practitioners of, the art of speechwriting and rhetoric, has provided that advice to many of the world's best known speakers. And now Intelligence Squared, the home of debate, is hosting a one-day speechwriting course with Philip.

Philip was Tony Blair's chief speechwriter in 10 Downing Street, and has since written for leaders in politics, business and the non-profit sector. He is also a columnist at The Times and is the author of five books, including two on rhetoric and speechwriting.

Philip's process draws on the ancient art of rhetoric, the emerging science of influence and persuasion, and his own experience writing for top leaders. During the course of the day, you will learn how to gauge an audience, build an argument, write crisply and effectively, and deliver memorable presentations and speeches.

The course is limited to 15 people and will take place at the Charlotte Street Hotel, London, with lunch included.

For anyone unable to make the course on 20th March, we have now added a second date: 7th May 2019.

Course Leader

Philip Collins

Columnist for The Times, where he pioneered the analysis of major speeches. He was chief speechwriter to prime minister Tony Blair in 10 Downing Street between 2004 and 2007 and has subsequently written keynote speeches for a range of senior politicians, leaders of charities and NGOs and CEOs. He is the author of The Art of Speeches and Presentations and When They Go Low, We Go High: Speeches that shape the world – and why we need them.

On The Brink Of A No-Deal Brexit: The Town Hall Debate

Britain is now facing one of the biggest constitutional crises in its history, As Brexit looms, Intelligence Squared staged a special town hall meeting with some of the country's most prominent political leaders.

We were joined on stage by former Conservative MP and UKIP MP Douglas Carswell; Conservative MP Kenneth Clarke; Director of UK in a Changing Europe Anand Menon; MP for North Antrim for the DUP Ian Paisley Jr; and Labour MP for Birmingham Yardley Jess Phillips. The debate was chaired by the Guardian's Jonathan Freedland.
