Broken record here: Contrition has to be coordinated with all other aspects of the response. And this sounds like an apology that's not an apology which would like make matters worse. The problem is that people don't want you to apologize for frequenting prostitutes, they want you to apologize for being a pedophile and for sex trafficking--and they don't want you to apologize for that, they want you to be crucified for that. A simple apology doesn't change the other side's narrative; I actually think it propels it. A proper apology is not an apology, it's a ritual act of public mortification and confession. You have to be naked and through yourself on the mercy of the media. To say the very least, the stage has to be set for this.

I agree that any push back seems to leads to trouble- so- what about some act of contrition (brad) . with an apology alongside clearly setting the facts straight.! No pedohile no trafficking . And then cvra girls drop their case . I.e. I establish a mental health center for sex workers . [REDACTED] center ?
