I have one investor who's CIO has been working on this strategy below but now the family office doesn't want to do it. He is thinking of leaving if he could find another family office to do the strategy and i think he is good judge of talent. I'm thinking it could be a good biz for JE to meet him.

This is a similar strategy I'm now being pitched by GS
Petershill Private Equity Seeding

The Alternative Investment & Manager Selection (AIMS) team at Goldman Sachs will look to make LP anchor investments in next generation private equity managers. In addition to traditional LP returns, the strategy will pursue revenue sharing opportunities and preferred strategic rights as part of its total return strategy. Aims to invest in 6-8 managers and seeks to build a diverse portfolio across managers, geographies and strategies.

DST Opportunities II Access -- note: docs due end of next week

DST provides clients exposure to DST Global VI as well as to co-investment opportunities alongside DST Global VI. Founded by Yuri Milner in 2009, DST Global is raising its sixth fund to pursue non-controlling investments in late-stage private companies in the global Internet industry with valuations of at least $500 million. By leveraging its global network, DST typically targets companies with the following investment characteristics: (i) category leaders; (ii) strong CEO / management teams; (iii) high secular growth; and (iv) a clear path to potential profitability. DST has invested in companies such as Facebook, Alibaba Group, JD.com, Spotify, Didi, Airbnb, Meituan, Kuaishou, Auto1, etc.

Viola Growth III Access -- note: docs due end of the month

Founded in 1999, Viola Group is an Israel-based investment firm that currently manages nearly $3 billion in AUM across five separately-managed strategies, including Viola Growth. Established in 2008, Viola Growth is currently raising Fund III to pursue expansion phase investments in innovative global technology companies that are based in Israel or have strong connections to Israel. The Fund will primarily target companies with revenues over $10 million in the fields of cloud analytics, marketing, fintech, machine learning and cybersecurity.
