

From: "jeffrey E." <jeevacation@gmail.com>
To: Jeffrey Epstein <jeevacation@gmail.com>
Subject: jeffrey martin
Date: Wed, 12 Jul 2017 10:35:07 +0000

Upgrade

- Settings
- Contacts

-
-
-

-

- Inbox

- Drafts
- Sent
- Starred
- Archive
- Spam
- Trash
- All Mail

- Folders / Labels

Upgrade storage

35.85 KB / 500.00 MB

3.9.1

For JEE...

1:51 AM

JeJm

For JEE...

From: JeJm <[REDACTED]>

Sent

1:51 AM (5 hours ago)

To: [REDACTED]

This message will expire in 6 Days 19 Hours 17 Minutes 50 Seconds

Hi Jeffrey,

I've been thinking about both you and your interests in the "weird stuff," as you put it. What can I say, twenty-three days with virtually no outside communication while a team of small Indian men take liberties with every orifice on your body just seems to lead to reflection. Deep, deep reflection. ;)

I know several people have mentioned you to me in the past and tried to get us to hook up. I recognize that much of the world spends a lot of time trying to figure out how to get a few minutes of someone like yours' time. To be frank, I get a lot of pings from the super-rich. Years ago it was kind of interesting, but generally I haven't found them to be worth my time. My project wouldn't really be accelerated by anything they offer, unless I could somehow use it to clone myself with all knowledge intact. I used to pass them along to others when possible, which led to a lot of interesting stuff getting funded that wouldn't have otherwise. In recent years I've mostly just ignored them.

Having said that, I appreciate you reaching out to discuss your interests in this area, because you appear to be taking it all quite seriously. That's unlike the other super-rich people I've been exposed to, who mostly either want a quick path to enlightenment that is safe for their life or circus-level entertainment in stuff like we've spoken about. So, I want you to know that I've taken your ping and what you're looking for seriously, and have been thinking carefully about it and meditating on it.

I could tell from talking to you that you form impressions of someone very quickly, and I'm guessing accurately. I do as well, so I didn't need to speak more in person to size you up. I know you prefer face-to-face, phone, video chat, etc. forms of communication. That will be fine in the future, but during this period phone and internet have been virtually non-existent for me. I have some tight scheduling issues coming up, and need to know sooner than later if this needs to be worked in. So, I'm just putting everything up front in this email.

As you know, I spend my time researching PNSE (enlightenment, nonduality, etc.), working to engineer it, trying to lay the necessary groundwork for a commercial ecosystem for it for when its needed, and other groundwork so the government doesn't ban it like it did hallucinogens in the 1970's. I started doing this because despite having had a truly amazing life up to 11 years ago, I still wasn't as happy as I felt I could or should be. No one seemed to be able to help, so I went back to school to acquire the skills to research the world's happiest people and try to help myself. That was the best decision I ever made.

The area you're interested in is one that I've had nearly a life-long background and interest in, for reasons I'm not putting in an email. Long before I started researching PNSE, I was trying to figure out what was and wasn't true about all this "weird stuff." I fell into various BS potholes during the early years, then became much more skeptical, and over time have pretty much gleaned all the available nuggets and put what can be together by getting at the backstories on everything and everyone who's in that space in the West, and some other key places like Russia. Encountering a whole other perspective on it during the PNSE research has added significantly to my knowledge and understanding of it all. Though I haven't been as focused on it during this period, it definitely filled in many of the major remaining gaps. All of this has left me in a rather unique position for perspective, context, and understanding - to say the least.

As I mentioned when we spoke, these days the "weird stuff" is not likely to rise to the top of my research agenda, however it does have some important and significant relationships to PNSE. I've taken the recent days to really think about it all and put it in perspective. I have such limited time, and I need to be very careful where I invest it. The reality is that if this "weird stuff" area is developed further, it would likely open the most rapid, reliable, and instantaneous path to PNSE. However, there are a lot of other lower hanging fruit that can still work nearly as well, and are much easier and not "weird" to people. So, I'm going to stay focused on them.

However, it is undeniable that a great deal else would go along with progress in this "weird stuff" area. It would transform people and science's understanding of, literally, everything. Although I avoid the topic publicly, I consider the types of phenomenon you're interested in pursuing to be real. I've seen and experienced too much, including much that has involved me in some way, to believe otherwise at this point. While the public scientist in me is careful to say things like, "well, there's really no way to know if the person was just able to exert some sort of electromagnetic effect on my visual cortex from that distance," privately I am far beyond any doubts about these various phenomena.

What they clearly suggest is that this world is not at all what it seems. Not by a long shot, and in ways virtually no one suspects - even people who think they study and specialize in things like this, or are steeped in disciplines like parapsychology. They all truly seem to have no clue regarding the overall picture and its implications. I'm not sure why that is because at least a few seem quite intelligent. My best guess has been that it is because of all the political cliques that exist who don't talk to each other, and also how under attack so many of them feel because of what they are into. By being neutral, open and positive, over the last 25+ years I've been able to get the info and back stories from everyone that they don't talk about or publish.

THIS IS IMPORTANT: What I say next, I say out of genuine caring for you. Please take it very seriously. You need to very carefully consider that the rabbit hole you're trying to uncover an entrance to and go down is like no other. The implications of it are beyond anything you can conceive of at the moment. It is not something to be done lightly. You should very carefully consider whether you truly want the experiences and answers you're seeking here, because you can't unsee things. They profoundly change both you and your worldview when experienced, and can't be discussed with people without sounding crazy.

To really get at it scientifically and make something of it would require an incredibly serious undertaking. Pieces of it have been tried occasionally by this or that centimillionaire or billionaire, but none have succeeded that I know of. Sometimes they started to show results but even minor progress freaked them out so much that they shut it down. A couple strayed a bit too close to classified technology and were shut down. The most common problem among the rest was that the piece they chose to work on was just too small to yield fruit, and they refused to consider the wider possibilities and implications and go there. It just seemed too strange and even 'crazy.'

I finally got around to Googling you during one of the brief moments when the facility reconnected to the outside world, read the various profiles of you, and so forth. I can see why you're having issues getting experiences. They confirm my intuition from our short chat that you pretty much have the deck stacked against you, and why.

Based on our research your three biggest barriers are: immersion in a highly analytical mind, high mathematical aptitude, and a large sex drive with at least some degree of dominance focus. These are all things that co-vary in our research populations with tremendous struggle and difficulty in making progress towards the type experiences you're interested in. Essentially, they are hallmarks of a mind that is incredibly strong and won't let go for long enough to allow the experiences in.

I hate to be the one that has to break it to you, but if you don't want this more than sex you should just give up the quest now. There's no hope for you. The types of experiences you're after require strict celibacy, for years at a minimum. There's just no way around it. Kidding! That's actually not true at all, don't worry. You can breathe again. I just thought it would be good to address your worst possible nightmare early in this email. In fact, you can have as much sex as you want, it just has to be with 80+ year old Asian men, and done in caves in the Himalayas. BTW, be sure not to fall for the ones who claim to be hundreds of years old.

I'm actually similar to you, and it was flat out brutal for me as well. For a very long time I felt the same way you do, if that makes you feel any better (about spiritual experiences, in my case, which is certainly part of the picture you're exploring). My long-time girlfriend used to call me a 'spiritual turnip.' No kidding. I was convinced for decades that maybe I just wasn't wired for it in my nervous system or something. The list of things I went through is endlessly longer than yours is at this point. So, I know how that much effort with little-to-nothing to show for it feels, and it is a major motivation behind my current efforts. People shouldn't have to waste so much time on bullshit. Well, not unless they are in finance or social media. Those guys totally have it coming. Wait...what did you say you do professionally again? Restaurants or something...right?

Unless you get extremely lucky, I don't think it will matter how many more people you have parade in front of you trying to give you an experience. Though there are people out there (mostly in hiding, because demoing their skills has only freaked people around them out for the most part) who seem to be able to deliver an experience for just about anyone, even if you do get lucky and have someone like Gino find one and bring him or her to you, I don't think it will be that satisfying or useful in broader extrapolation for a "mechanism of action," as you put it.

You'll miss 90+% of the picture and lose years that you don't have to in the process. Buried in the 90+% will be the best stuff.

You have to be able to really understand it. For that, you need two things. First, to gain some experience it personally, internally. For that to happen in a reasonable timeframe, you need to have the groundwork laid in you by an integrated team of highly skilled people if you're going to make progress that adds up to anything meaningful. This is not a simple thing to craft, and in my experience can't be done reliably from within a single tradition. Second you need a shortcut to an accurate composite overview, to have all the bullshit sorted through, and to not waste time on the wrong people. That is very, very hard to do. It has taken me a lifetime. I don't know of anyone else who's done it, and I'm quite convinced at this point that I know or know all about (if I don't want to personally know) everyone who matters.

I tend to follow my intuition above all else in deciding what to put time into, because it's always worked out. My process for that is to deeply mull things over, and see what pops out intuitively at the end of that process. I'm incredibly busy, but my intuition is telling me that you could make a major contribution here, if you were truly motivated and given the right jump-start. It just feels like you have the right mix. I've double checked this as best I can by pinging others who's intuition has also worked out as reliable for me in the past.

If progress is made in this area, it will be both significantly groundbreaking in general and for PNSE, so it does relate to my current efforts. No one currently looking into it is going to make any real headway, that's for sure. They just don't have the right mix, and I've found them to almost entirely be a waste of time. They will also just waste your money and time, BTW, in case you haven't figured that out already. I'm curious to see how serious you are about it given my intuition about you, so I'm laying it all out for you as best I can here.

Experiences aren't your primary issue - capacity is. You have built tremendous capacity in many areas of your life, but most are out of phase with this one. I do think that it's important that you have experiences in this area, but that is not enough in my opinion.

Experiences may peak your interest, but I don't think they will hold it. You'll most likely take this or that person that gives you the experience and shuffle them off to some Ivy League (or wannabe Ivy League) lab, where they will find nothing. Harvard provided me with great empirical training that I'll always be grateful for, but it is the last place research like this will be done successfully until it is far enough along to fit into their model. Schools like that acquire truly revolutionary research from the academic hinterlands once it reaches a key point, and cultivate it further. They don't originate it. I personally don't think they are capable of it, having seen their inner workings. I have my neuro lab where I do for a reason.

My personal motivation and rationale for you building capacity vs. focusing on having an 'experience' is simple. If you build capacity, you'll be more deeply interested and involved. You'll understand it all more deeply internally. This will cause you put more of yourself into it, which I think is critical, as well as more resources than you otherwise would. It will move the whole thing along faster in every way you are capable of, all of which are substantial.

As I'm sure you've gathered, I am an empirical pragmatist. I have an almost completely practical focus, and am not interested in blah, blah, blah (as you put it). I'm fine with theory, but I'm much more interested in actual usable impact than fighting over who's right about this or that. Right is best determined by who has something that works in the real world. I suspect that you are like this as well.

If that is the case and you want to get into this area, you have to really understand it. No matter how bizarre and crazy what you're exposed to sounds or seems. You are going to have to be open minded and take some time and develop the appropriate capacity. If you're willing to do those two things, then I'm willing to work with you so you can achieve them as quickly and efficiently as possible.

What I'll Do

I will be your key advisor in this part of your life, initially working closely with you to build up capacity in you. In a very real sense, you will be the empirical experiment we work on together first. We will move as quickly as you can handle and we both have time for, being very careful regarding how we integrate it all for you because of the responsibilities in the rest of your life. The essential 'experience' starting point is getting you to be able to sense energy. We'll accomplish this with an initial in-person assessment by me, then another round of assessments by others I select based on mine. Then we will bring in the most advanced people from my network who are best at cultivating what needs to be done, and see which ones fit best to where you are at.

It's important to keep in mind that no one can do everything in the space you're wanting to explore. Some people may have a remarkable ability to see energies, beings, etc. But, that's it. That's what they can do. Or maybe they can also do a few other things, like move objects. Other's may have the ability to heal. I have that one. But, they aren't seeing beings. Even among those who see beings, often people see specific kinds (I think of them as specific bandwidths) of them and not others. You get the idea. Everyone is a unique, partial mix of the overall landscape.

You will be like everyone else. You'll have one or more areas with aptitude, and others that just aren't your calling. Figuring that out will be important to meaningful progress for you and will take some trial and error to see what you are and aren't sensitive to. Because we know we're working with the best people, we'll be able to determine fit without wasting time or introducing inaccuracies.

We'll also want to build capacity in your environment. For example, it's likely that one of your residences will be energetically better than others. Maybe NYC, maybe NM, maybe St. Jeff, maybe somewhere else. Environment matters. Even the world's greatest expert on fires can't build one in a blizzard with nothing flammable to scrounge from the surroundings. We'll be having good people suss this out, clean and protect it energetically, etc. If this sounds weird, get used to it!

This may sound esoteric, but another issue I see stems from the press you've received, most of which is similar. It all must lead to a lot of negativity being projected from people's consciousness in your direction. This is something important to deal with as part of the overall picture. I don't mean publicly with PR, but rather energetically. I know that may sound weird to you. Again, get used to it!

These things are step one. When you can reliably feel energy then we move on. By that point I'm sure you'll be well into theorizing mechanism since you'll be able to play with it yourself. I expect that we'll be exploring this together for quite a while. If you want to do that, if so here are my terms of engagement:

Part I: Non-Financial

1.) First, our work together must be completely confidential unless and until we both agree that it won't be, starting with this email. This is not an offer you can pass along to someone else or involve anyone else in. I don't take referrals. I don't care who your clients and friends are that are interested in this. This email originates in a feeling I have about you being worth the time I spend with you. I'm happy to talk enlightenment or anything else I know about with others if time permits (including any of your friends, etc.) but much of what we'll do will be outside of what I say publicly and it will need to stay that way until agreed upon otherwise.

2.) This needs to be a priority in your life. It requires a certain density to make progress with. If you do a little here, and a little there, all spread out - you won't make meaningful progress. We'll be respectful of the demands of your life, but it will need to be situated within your list of priorities. Along these lines, you also must agree not to mess up my success percentage. ;) Right now, ■■■ batting 100% with everyone I've personally worked with.

3.) Much of this is going to seem weird. I mean really, really bizarre to the point of impossible to believe and sometimes completely nuts. The people, stories, their beliefs, the stuff you see and do - you name it, all of it. Even with the frameworks I provide for you to slot it into, this is going to be an extremely strange ride for you. You have to trust me, work with who I ask, and do what they recommend no matter how bizarre the person seems to you. You'll notice very quickly that, for the most part, the very best people all have the most entrenched belief systems, and most of them contradict each other. You don't care about any of that, just what they can do and do for you. You have to let them work their magic, and discard or ignore the rest that comes with it. Whatever you do, don't fall into the trap of looking into their beliefs for hidden gold.

4.) I'm sure before long you'll be involved in all sorts of research efforts based on your experiences. You must agree to make sure I'm involved in all these projects at some level, a co-author on pubs unless I decline it, etc. Frankly, you'll most likely waste your money on these if you don't anyway. I bet that when I find out what they were, I could have gotten some of your previous efforts to work.

5.) Relationships with some of the most advanced spiritual people you'll be working with will be very, very fragile and generally not governed by the rules of social interaction as you currently understand them. You'll need to give yourself time to adjust to that, and be extra careful until you have. I will phase them in as I feel comfortable, but you definitely will not be able to 'just be yourself' with them. You'll need to very carefully monitor the stimulus-response of your interactions and learn how best to interact. Observing me will help you learn faster. Time with these people is rare and hard to come by, especially in the ways you'll be working with them. It needs to be treated that way. For the most part, they don't function like other people and the rules you're used to in gaining compliance from others don't apply to them. In many ways, who you are and the life you've built is a detriment in their eyes.

6.) You must agree not to push the people you'll be working with to be involved in research projects. It's fine to mention it briefly and see if they pick up on it, but if you push, they say no and you persist, many will disappear on you.

7.) Some of the people you'll work with will be women with a liberal political orientation. Many in general will have very specific ethical standards based in religion or spirituality. The reality is that all of these folks will most likely have an issue with your background. So, you'll need to be comfortable working with folks anonymously or using an alias. They will understand anonymity because nearly all will have dealt with people who did not want the rest of their life to find out they were working on this kind of stuff. Also, although your normal dress and demeanor will be fine for them, your other trappings will repel some of the key people we'll want you to work with. We will need alternate and more "normal" seeming locations to work in when you need to be in NYC, etc.

8.) Along these lines...a few (legal age) slave girls of my own choosing, in the event that at least some of your press coverage is accurate... ;)

9.) Getting you or anyone else an 'experience' is not interesting to me, unless it leads to more widespread and meaningful progress in some way. I'm gambling that once you experience even 'just' energetic sensations first hand, transmission of them, etc. that you'll want to start trying to figure out how they could be possible. The ability to feel things like that yourself whenever you want will add you to both the subject and experimenter pool. I expect to be working together on this for a long time, and I intuit you will make important progress on it theoretically and practically that no one else has. Just want to state this succinctly and explicitly, and make sure that you are serious about this as well.

10.) You must recognize that this is not an exclusive engagement. I'm making time for it in a life that is full to overflowing just like you are, because of my intuition about your potential. However, it has to fit into both of our lives and other commitments, not just yours.

11.) It has to be fun to work and spend time with you. Arrangements like this are like giving a new professor tenure. Regardless of their accomplishments, ultimately as you sit there you think, "do I want to have lunch every day with this person for the next 10 years?" Fun isn't a problem for either of us and we seem to have good chemistry in that area, but I just want to make it clear that enjoying my time is important to me. I only get so much of it.

12.) If we make it more than several weeks and you're not sensing energy, I'll fire you. In all seriousness, just about the only reason for that will be because you're not truly serious deep down, and I'll most likely reclaim my time in that case. No pressure...you overachieving psychic turnip, you! ;)

Part II, Financial

13.) Like you in my private work with high net-worth individuals I charge high fees and turn away nearly everyone. Probably this is similar to your "can't really be true" (according to the press) $1B & let me deeply into your life contractual arrangements with clients.

I look for four things. First, the willingness to pay a sizable initial performance-based fee, because it shows the person values and will prioritize what I'm offering and is less likely to waste my time. I've known plenty of centimillionaires and billionaires well enough to see them pass out six to seven figure chunks like they are pennies, and for things of fleeting interest. They all seem to manufacture money on demand, so when they don't want to pay something it's generally because they aren't serious enough about it. Second, the ability for outsized positive impact on the world relating to my expertise that I don't think I could create otherwise, from and with an acceptable level of time investment. Third, the potential for significant additional/ongoing revenue to go along with that impact. Fourth, fun.

My performance-based fee is $10M net after tax or tax-free, in this case payable when you have an experience, which by the way, you're going to have very soon if we work together. In fact, in short order it will be kind of laughable to you that you've gone through the period you have up to this point. I will be engineering your initial experiences around sensing energy because it is the key starting point, for reasons you'll come to understand soon if we work together.

This payment should be structured in a way that is not easy for even someone like you to find as linked to me, that also allows the funds to be spent penalty free in any amount in the US, EU, etc. I don't like to look like someone worth suing, and I value being underestimated - both lessons from early mentors. Whatever structure you want to use for that will be fine but need to be run by the only FA I completely trust. He handles plenty of billionaires himself, so don't worry about quality and sophistication. I'll pull 10%-20% out and give it to the FA so I know the account is real, and leave the rest invested with you assuming you have an account you trade for F&F, key employees/associates or something similar. If not I'll understand that I don't meet your client requirements and just let the FA manage it all.

If you're wondering, $10M is the minimum amount that I calculate I gave up over the last decade by changing my life to do this. When I started working with my first high net-worth person, I decided that I ultimately only wanted to work with other people who valued what I'd learned at least as much as I did. It's worth much more for someone in your shoes, but I'm happy to have that come in over time (points 15 and 16 below).

IMPORTANT REITERATION: Over the last decade, for whatever reason, I've met a sizable number of the super-rich, from numerous double-digit billionaires on down, all around the world. Quite a few of them, especially Buddhist Asians, have ferreted me out because they are old, desperate for PNSE before they die, and as far I as can tell I'm the only person who can deliver it with a combination of confidentiality, reliability, rapidity, and safety, and then help them get adjusted to it in a way that doesn't screw up their complicated lives. I've come to sense that the only people more miserable than the extreme poor are the super-rich, and their families. To date I have only worked with a couple that felt right intuitively. I even turned down the opportunity to wake up most of the key Silicon Valley royalty as a group project. It just didn't feel right. But you like fun and blondes with big tits, so that's another matter entirely!

You're not showing up for PNSE. You want the weird stuff, but it's effectively the same deal as you'll understand soon enough. For years now I've had zillionaires coming out my ears that I don't want. I am on a mission and they are an, often excessively persistent and thus time consuming - which seems to co-vary with being super-rich, distraction. Please keep point #1 at the top of the terms in mind. I'd say it is a reasonable expectation that I've turned down so many of these folks, networks of them, private interest groups of them, etc. that at this point word on the street is that I don't work one-on-one with high-net worth individuals. That's exactly what I want, so whether we work together or not - please don't spoil it. This email is a risk for me in this sense and I don't want it to turn into a regret.

14.) You agree to cover the expenses to get people to you, me to them or you when needed, costs for their time and services, etc. Since my only other fees are performance-based, essentially these are your up-front costs. I don't care if it is some general pool like you've done with people like Gino, or expensed individually through someone in one of your offices. It all has to be tracked either way for someone's taxes. I don't fly coach or stay in crappy hotels, life is too short. I'm fine staying in guest houses/suites, etc. as long as they come appointed with your third and fourth most attractive models or Russians (don't want to be too much of an imposition, on the other hand if #'s 1 and 2 aren't busy...;). Private transport is fine, but I prefer commercial business or first to the tiny jets some are in the habit of sending. I'm just too tall and their seats are often worse than coach. Also, some of the people we'll be working with refuse to charge for their time. Whatever you do, don't push them on that point. We'll lose them.

15.) Your Fetzer radio and TV story was not lost on me. Understanding these phenomena with mathematics and physics, predictions based on them, engineering them, etc. will be insanely valuable. My intuition is that you'll figure out at least pieces of it, and capitalize on it based on the short cuts and head start I'll provide, plus other stuff we do together. I want ongoing financial participation in whatever that turns out to be.

16.) Related to the above, I also want financial participation in anything you've already got underway that gets monetized, provided I add value to it. Same for anything you tried in the past that I can make work that is monetized in some way.

17.) Soon you will feel energy transmissions. You'll also learn that there are people who can very precisely see and guide this in you. I personally think that one of the lowest hanging fruits is a sync'd HD-EEG experiment involving this. Sufficient preliminary work has already shown that it's going to show up in both brains, with some sort of time delay. My intuition is that this delay will be a useful and important mathematical cornerstone for you to chew on, once it is nailed down at different distances. We'll want to investigate this in a private project very early on, and I'll want to do it with my own hand-picked people so that it doesn't get messed up. There are only a handful of people who won't mess this up.

18.) Many of the most useful people in a key area for what you are interested in will soon be dead from old age. To say that the clock is ticking is an understatement. A key person could literally die while you're reading this that might take years or longer to replace. There's a secret meeting (or a series of them) that needs to happen as soon as possible between these people. The right ones need to all be put in the same room, for as long as it takes, with the right framing, to share knowledge and, to some degree, fight it out. It is the rarest of opportunities to let pass by, but has to be done just right to be successful. If it is, it has the very real possibility of saving your "mechanism of action" portion of the project a huge amount of time. The politics and personalities involved are very challenging, but I think we can approach it by offering to just buy most of their time with whatever they want for a few day's consulting rate. And combine that with the right massaging and approaches by me and, when appropriate, the right other person in my network. Probably the initial meeting can be done for less than $200K, maybe a lot less, and the outcome has the potential to be priceless.

Okay, that's it. If this is a passing or occasional sideline interest for you, or you're just interested in a stream of people who may or may not successfully entertain you, then you should definitely not think any more about what I've written here. I'm in the moving myself and humanity forward business, not the circus business.

My intuition tells me, however, that you realize there are Newton-Einstein-Bohr-<insert Epstein here> level revolutionary breakthroughs waiting to be had by someone with enough resources and brainpower, that you're interested in taking a genuine crack at it, and that you'll have some success if you get the right footing.

If that's the case, you'll mostly be wasting your time without me. If there was someone out there who was even close to equivalent to me, I'd know. In fact, I'd refer you to them to save my time as that's my M.O. I don't generally do things that I can get other people to because that's a waste of my time. Even in this case, I'm leveraging your time and interest to move this forward. I'm just involving myself enough to make sure you can.

Think about it and let me know. If you want to give it a try, I fly out of India to give a keynote at a conference in Chicago on the 14th and possibly to San Diego on the 16th to give another one. I'm being hit up for that as I type this, but am trying to get someone else to do it. After that weekend, I can cancel at least some of the following week and spend it getting started wherever you are, but I'll need to know soon to not be a jerk about that re-schedule. If that window is missed, start date would be early to mid-August. I would prefer to start as soon as possible, because a very involved and complicated period for another project is about to hit as well, and I need to figure out how to manage it all.

Much Love,
Jeffery

--

please note

The information contained in this communication is confidential, may be attorney-client privileged, may constitute inside information, and is intended only for the use of the addressee. It is the property of JEE

Unauthorized use, disclosure or copying of this communication or any part thereof is strictly prohibited and may be unlawful. If you have received this communication in error, please notify us immediately by return e-mail or by e-mail to jeevacation@gmail.com, and destroy this communication and all copies thereof, including all attachments. copyright -all rights reserved