Dear Jeffrey,

We have completed a rough cut the episode featuring my conversation with Woody on "This is just to say" by William Carlos Williams.

The episode now includes 2 poets, an historian and five couples and a lot of archival footage and music. It's warm and textured and funny and it teaches a lot, too.

Our executive producer at WGBH loves the episode, and I really like it too. ( It is better, by the way, for your suggestions/critique of my performance). Thank you.

The one primary element that is missing from the episode is a full reading of the poem from Woody.

We don't need video--just a good audio file of him reading the poem a few times. If Woody would record three readings of it in his studio, that would help me so much. The poem is around 50 words long, he could do a few readings in a minute or two.

Would you help with the ask?

Lisa
