Dear Jeffrey,

How are you doing? [REDACTED] sounds very excited and happy about the time with you. Thank you for giving her the opportunity. She works hard for everything she achieves in life and I see this fire and determination in her eyes, that I like a lot.

I'm glad you two synced well. What do you think of [REDACTED] cv and photos ?

Or maybe if you want [REDACTED] to work for you, you could focus on training her to be good and helpful for you and not looking for more people at this point. I still wait for a CV of a smart, young London university student who is interested. And two more assistants to deliver you - I remember.

I had my past weeks at [REDACTED] and with that experience of 10 months understood how many politics are involved in careers in big organisations. I was offered a job as [REDACTED] However my line manager and chief of staff in [REDACTED] not to take me even though my work permit for [REDACTED] job was in process of being organised. They made up reasons...

She basically ruined my hope to build a quick career and told me I need to sit on my current low position 2-3 years first. Anyway, it was very disappointing since I have to look for what I should do and where after [REDACTED]

I resigned from [REDACTED] with the disappointment...not everyone is genuine and honest in this world.

I'm very happy flying to [REDACTED] now to start the [REDACTED]
Jeffrey, I feel so fortunate and happy to have this opportunity to study at American university thanks to you. You contribute so much to my education. I hope to make an amazing career no matter how many people would wish to put stones in it and see you proud of me :-)

I miss you and hope to see soon!! Let me know if you hear anyone looking for a junior [REDACTED] in Europe or USA.

Greetings from [REDACTED] road
