Dear Jeffrey,
Thank you for your message. Your proposal to have the owner still having full access to her house during renovation time and you being very non intrusive over that two to three-year time span might indeed be well received. Although that may not fill the gap between your offer and her selling price, I will let her know your good intention to have her think about it.

Best

thank you for your time yesterday . No rush in the middle of your holiday. . I am very familiar with the emotion of property and the role it plays in a widows life. I might propose that the madam can use the property for the two to three years during its renovation, I could work around her travel schedule with mine. she would have full access to her house. I would stay at a hotel during the construction period this way she has sold it , but still " owns" it.

thx [REDACTED] I had asked [REDACTED] if they had plans for the house . he said yes. . . its an interesting site. I am aware of the history. It will take two to three years to complete. maybe a little more with the proper finishing of garden. . probably 8-10million for completion. renovation, infrastructure , including air con. electric internet . irrigation. wells. security. etc. At a fair price I would be a buyer. . As [REDACTED] told you , I am not a fan of construction. however it could be a fun project. I am not sure of your role , ie commissions to be paid by me or seller. ? either ok with me. however if you feel awkward in pointing out its real value to owner , i can do it and be responsible to pay commissions. I also need to understand taxes. transfer, etc. . labor rules. .

Dear Jeffrey,

I hope this email finds you well, and that [REDACTED] made a nice tour of the property.

The owner asked me to send you this information.

As soon as I have more details I'll forward them to you.

Kind regards,

[REDACTED]
