Announcing Recipient of 2017 Origins Postdoctoral Lectureship Award

We are pleased to announce Zachary Adam is the recipient of the 2017 Origins Project Postdoctoral Lectureship Award. This $10,000 award, the largest of its kind in the world, is offered to promising young scholar-scientists on the basis of their scholarly achievement and potential, as well as their skills in science communication. Part of the award is a week-long residency at ASU where Adam will offer a series of departmental colloquia and a large public lecture on the topic of his expertise in early April. Look for more info soon on the public lecture, set for Tuesday, April 4, 2017 at 6:30pm.

Tomorrow is Sun Devil Giving Day

Sun Devil Giving Day, March 17th, is your chance to give to the programs, projects and people you care about at ASU and show the strength that comes from being the largest public university in the U.S. Your generosity helps us continue to explore fundamental questions, speed discovery, and enhance public understanding and excitement about science and scholarship and their role in our culture.

Learn more about giving to the Origins Project by following this link. Information about Sun Devil Giving Day will be posted soon.

Upcoming Announcements

A lot is happening here at the Origins Project, and we are preparing some big announcements to share about what we are up to and what we have in store for ways you can engage. We will reveal upcoming events to take place in April, and more. We encourage you to invite your colleagues, friends and family to sign up for our mailing list through our Contacts page.
