Every perceptual experience is a mobject
This includes body/ brain / universe
Mobjects are modified forms of consciousness experienced in consciousness and made out of consciousness
They appear and disappear in space/time Consciousness itself is non local and not in space time mactions are actions on mental objects. like rotating a ball in your mind. . it seems to involve the same brain places as actions in the material world.

Mactons evoke the experience of the universe
Different mactions in different species evoke different universe
Evolution of species is evolution of mobjects and mactions in consciousness
Darwin needs an update

Will plan !

See you tonight

Here is how your vocabulary fits the worldview I'm in favor of Brain/Body/ Universe are interdependently co arising symbolic representations of species specific consciousness - mobjects and mactions in species of consciousness

If you think it's a good idea I can do a draft for an article to be published with input from your prestigious luminaries as coauthors

The principle of plenitude asserts that the universe contains all possible forms of existence. The historian of ideas Arthur Lovejoy was the first to discuss this philosophically important principle explicitly. Lovejoy distinguishes two versions of the principle: a static version, in which the universe displays a constant fullness and diversity, and a temporalized version, in which fullness and diversity gradually increase over time. a 400 year old idea

Needs to be resurrected in this dry sterile mechanistic age of scientism

Taking of

See you soon
