It's not only about our bank, but likely to be hurtful. I have not seen the preview. Only communication has it.

Hi Jeffrey. This is Ron Lanthier, Julian's buddy from Canada with whom you chatted yesterday. Sorry about this long text but it is my only way to communicate with you in writing.

Thx for taking my call yesterday. I will call you again on Weds as you kindly suggested. When you are chatting about the Detroit CBD office market with your real estate experts, please be aware that very few real estate people (even located in Detroit!) truly understand the depth of the transformation going on in this geographically compact submarket. For example, the major brokerage houses all report Detroit CBD office vacancy at about 11%, having fallen from about 20% five years ago. Although this is indicative of good positive momentum, the real figures are a vacancy of about 5% today from about 15% five years ago, showing greater positive momentum and representing one of the tightest "landlord" submarkets in North America.

What most real estate experts also don't understand is the extent of the impact on this compact submarket on Gilbert's and Ilitch's $2.5 billion spent so far and the impact of their "currently in the pipeline" expenditures of a further $2 billion in the next two to four years. One must remember that this submarket is 1/20 the size of Manhattan, making these $4.5 billion of expenditures "equivalent" to $90 billion of Manhattan expenditures, solely on real estate. The bottom line is we are in the fourth inning of this renaissance and most experts don't really get it yet.

In addition, SE Michigan's high tech industrial base now rivals Silicon Valley in size. It is a different type ....of high tech, but now enormous in size, with one of the most important hubs now in the Detroit CBD.

If you thought it helpful, perhaps it might be good for me to chat directly to one of your real estate experts. Regardless, Jeffrey, I will call you on Weds as you requested!
