

WEST PALM BEACH — Multi-millionaire sex offender Jeffrey Epstein is suing a Los Angeles public relations agency in a West Palm Beach court over the firm's attempt to collect $155,000 from him.

It's yet another Gossip Extra scoop: Palm Beacher Epstein, 61, who was convicted of soliciting underage girls from the area's poorer suburbs for prostitution, claims in court papers here he wasn't served properly the judgment won by Sitrick & Co. in a previous Los Angeles court action.

It seems that the Wall Street prodigy Epstein hired Sitrick to clean up the public relations mess he created when he and Brit Prince Andrew were photographed together in Central Park in 2011 in NYC.

The London press went berserk when it found out Andrew hung out with a man forced to register as a sex offender in 2008 for his sexual hijinx with underage girls in his Palm Beach dungeon!

In suing Sitrick, Epstein now claims he doesn't live at 358 El Brillo Way in Palm Beach, where a process-server dropped the papers, but in the U.S. Virgin Islands.

We checked. And while Palm Beach property records show the $8 million-house on El Brillo is still owned by Epstein, the state's sexual offender tracking system shows Epstein indeed is in his home in St. Thomas, V.I.
