Untitled, Torn Pelvis

One of a Kind

1980
Bronze
60*25*45

At the start of the eighties Ilana Goor started an independent in-depth study of anatomy. She searched through books, experimented with clay and wax, and created numerous models of hollow torsos on a flagpole-like stand which was inspired by Greek mythological figures. The eyes were hollow, the mouths wide open similar to the Aztec sculptures, and surrealistic, severed and distorted bodies of men and women, which evoke the work of Yigal Tomarkin from the sixties. Seventy figures that she sculpted at that time including jewelry compose
