Subject: Projects We Love: Rewrite History

Date: Thu, 05 Sep 2013 19:35:12 +0000

We're sharing a few projects that look to the past... while we're planning for the future! For Kickstarter, the future means opening up to projects based in Canada on Monday, Sept. 9, and soon after to projects based in Australia and New Zealand. We can't wait!

Dan Budnik - Marching To The Freedom Dream

Dan Budnik - Marching To The Freedom Dream

By Trolley Books

In 1963, photographer Dan Budnik went to Washington ■■■ to document a civil rights march. That day became one of the most famous in modern American history, culminating in Martin Luther King Jr.'s "I Have A Dream" speech. To commemorate the 50th anniversary of the march, Budnik is publishing a new book with his photos from that day.

 FUBAR: MOTHER RUSSIA*FUBAR: MOTHER RUSSIA

By Jeff McComsey

Two years ago, graphic novelist Jeff McComsley's FUBAR 2 went from Kickstarter project to the New York Times Best Sellers List. Jeff's now back with a new graphic novel, Mother Russia. It takes place in 1943 in Stalingrad, where zombies have taken the city hostage and the only hope for the people is a single baby with a long rifle.

Rainbow Pencils

By Duncan Shotton

Pencils don't just write on paper; they can also be made of it. Duncan Shotton figured this out, and has been working to create a new pencil made entirely from recycled paper. His adorable project, Rainbow Pencils, also unravels in lovely rainbow shapes when sharpened.
