You have a colorful way of describing the interior that makes me ☺.

I am using the Citation photo that you liked as overall guidance. For example, we will strip the veneer and recover the two handrails in the cabin in the same (or color coordinating) material as the headliner / PSU's; this way it will "clean up" that dark line that runs fwd / aft by the headliner.

Am I on target?

all of the above, as the tables and wood work is currently bland and somewhat vulgar, , the more cashemre we use the better even the tables in the photos are too glaring and look more like a motor coach, think minimal and elegant. as you and i discussed the conference table is currelly hideous, and needs covers, to match what ever material we put on the back of the seats. also like in the current a top to place on the crednza so people can sit on it, without scrathcing, .

Good morning Jeffrey,

On the 25th you sent me three (3) photo's - presumably photo's you took while with Yves in Paris.

Attached is one of these photo's - a table with perimeter inlays and a tight grain, angled veneer insert. You did not provide any information other than the photo. Is this for reference to the center conference table? The sidewall tables? Just the inlays?
